CALL FOR APPLICATIONS
ASSISTANT EDITOR
JOURNAL OF APPLIED INSTRUCTIONAL DESIGN

The Journal of Applied Instructional Design is seeking applications for an Assistant Editor (3-year term) to begin November 1st, 2021.

The purpose of this journal is to bridge the gap between theory and practice by providing reflective practitioners a means for publishing articles related to the field. The journal establishes and maintains a scholarly standard with the appropriate rigor for articles based on design and development projects. Articles include evaluation reports (summative and formative), lessons learned, design and development approaches, as well as applied research. The articles are based on design and development projects as opposed to pure research projects and focus on lessons learned and how to improve the instructional design process. Rigor is established through articles grounded in research and theory.

A secondary goal of this journal is to encourage and nurture the development of the reflective practitioner in the field of instructional design. This journal encourages the practitioner as well as collaborations between academics and practitioners as a means of disseminating and developing new ideas in instructional design. The resulting articles inform both the study and practice of instructional design.

The assistant editor would be responsible for:

- Collaborating with the Editor-in-Chiefs to research and plan new special issues
- Liaise with team members ensuring deadlines are met
- Facilitating the peer-review process
- Suggesting areas of improvement for manuscripts

Requirements:

- A doctoral degree in Learning, Design, and Technology or a related field by January 1st, 2022
- Proficiency in English
- Experience with Google Suites
- Experience publishing research in peer-reviewed venues
- Attention to detail
- Excellent communication and interpersonal skills
- Ability to prioritize and multitask

Interested applicants should send an email expressing their interest, a CV, and two professional references by October 11th to Jill Stefaniak at jill.stefaniak@uga.edu. Please put JAID Assistant Editor in the Subject Line.